ACTG. DEAN C. WILLARD HECKEL
A. B., A. M., LL. B.

Rutgers Law School is fortunate to have as its Acting Dean, a man as proficient and honest as Dean Heckel. His educational background reveals degrees from Dartmouth College, Columbia University, and our own Rutgers Law School. In 1948, after serving as an officer in the U.S. Navy, he began his teaching career at Rutgers, the law school from which he was graduated, teaching numerous courses, including Torts, Domestic Relations, and Municipal Corporations. He has continued to do so energetically and successfully in school affairs, as to win the respect and admiration of all the students. Now, as Acting Dean, we further appreciate the fine work he is doing in helping to further build and expand Rutgers into a Law School of which any student would feel proud.

The first few months in law school are usually the busiest for the student. It is during this period that he is in the process of acquiring his confidence in his professors. During this period, during which only the beginning of the confidential relationship between the student and his instructors exists, all the most trying and difficult for the student. He remembers this period as one of almost utter confusion. But as soon as he acquires confidence the problems of the first few months disappear and he finds himself more fully comprehending the subject matter with greater ease. It is fortunate indeed, that this relationship exists at our law school, since it resembles the rest of the school years so being similar to the first few months, readily shows the importance of "confidence" to the student.

TAKING on a great responsibility and performing it well requires the ability of a capable administrator and able assistant. Acting Dean Heckel and the members of our faculty fulfill these requirements.
