A Faculty Legacy

The law cannot be learned from books alone. If it could there would be no need for law schools, for a law school, like any other institution of higher learning, is a place where student and teacher are expected to exchange ideas, to the intellectual enrichment of both. Hence a law school which can present to its students a faculty with a wide and varied background of scholastic and practical achievement, is one which has met one of the essential requirements of a competent educational institution.

The faculty of Rutgers Law School have brought to their classrooms such a collective wealth of scholarship and experience in the law. They have written learned treatises and law review articles in their respective fields; practiced law before the bar of this and other states; served on governmental bodies; participated in the drafting of legislation; and in many other ways have been of service to their profession, state, and nation. In all this we, the student body of Rutgers Law School have benefited from their accumulated knowledge and experience.

This "legacy" of the Law School faculty is but a continuation of the contributions of their predecessors. Two of the Justices of the Supreme Court of New Jersey are former members of the faculty. So also is a Judge of the Superior Court, as well as a former Governor of this State.

Thus has the faculty, in its own way, contributed to the enhancement and greater prestige of Rutgers Law School.
LEWIS WEBSTER JONES
Rutgers University President

Doctor Lewis Webster Jones has constantly exerted his energies for the betterment of Rutgers. He has played a part in accelerating the development of the plans for the new law center; the agricultural school was given two new buildings; ground was broken for a new dormitory in New Brunswick; and funds for a new library were appropriated. These are only a few of his accomplishments.

As a strong advocate of the liberal arts, one of Doctor Jones' biggest aims is to strike a balance between the liberal arts field and the technical field at Rutgers. Although no school has yet reached such a balance, he believes Rutgers can come close.

C. Willard Heckel
Assistant Dean

In addition to his heavy teaching schedule, Assistant Dean C. Willard Heckel is a close friend of each and every student. He is deeply concerned with student affairs, and enjoys his role as advisor for the student council, fraternities and other student groups.

Assistant Dean Heckel is also very active in civic and philanthropic affairs in the City of Newark. He was the chairman of the citizen's committee which brought about the charter revision in Newark, and it was in his representative capacity that he brought the National Municipal League award to Newark for its new charter.

We are indeed grateful to Assistant Dean Heckel for his unwavering devotion to worthy causes and to Rutgers Law School.

SECRETARIAL STAFF

Miss Dorothy M. List is the assistant to Dean Tunks and the head of a fine secretarial staff. In addition, many student problems are brought to her and she is ever ready to give her time to helping them resolve their difficulties.

Miss Kathleen Cowell is secretary to the Dean and Miss Audrey Richter is secretary to the Assistant Dean and recorder. Mrs. Winterspoon and Miss Handel, secretaries for the faculty, law review, and moot court programs are also a part of this secretarial staff which combines efficiency with personality and serves Rutgers Law School well.

LEHAN K. TUNKS
Dean of School of Law

Dean Tunks is the most active dean our law school has ever known; in fact he is our first full-time dean, who also teaches. He has dedicated himself to Rutgers Law School with such vitality that he deserves our commendation.

Through Dean Tunks' efforts, our school is kept in active communication with various national legal associations and we are well represented in local and state legal and civic groups. The Dean is our spokesman at University administration and trustees' meetings, and one of his aims is the building up of a larger faculty to meet the needs of an expanding law school. He is also an active worker with Justice Ackerman on Rutgers new Law Center.

LIEHM K. TUNKS, Dean of School of Law; A.B., University of Nebraska; J.D., Northwestern University; S.J.D., Yale University.

LEWIS WEBSTER JONES, President Rutgers University; A.B., Reed; Ph.D., Rockefeller Institute; LL.B., Yale; New York University; Princeton; L.H.D., Lafayette.

C. WILLARD HECKEL, Assistant Dean; A.B., Dartmouth; A.M., Columbia; LL.B., University of Newark, School of Law.

C. WILLARD HECKEL, Assistant Dean; A.B., Dartmouth; A.M., Columbia; LL.B., University of Newark, School of Law.

MISS KATHLEEN COWELL
MISS DOROTHY M. LIST
MISS AUDREY RICHTER
DAVID BECK, Assistant Professor of Law; A.B., Harvard; LL.B., Harvard University School of Law.

PERCY BORDWELL, Visiting Professor of Law; B.L. University of California; Ph.D., University of California; LL.B., Columbia University School of Law.

SIDNEY A. GUTENK, Associate Professor of Law; B.S., College of City of New York; LL.B., Columbia University School of Law.

ARTHUR B. LEWIS, Professor of Law; A.B., Rutgers University; LL.B., Harvard University School of Law.

THOMAS COWAN, Visiting Professor of Law; B.S., Ph.D., LL.B., University of Pennsylvania; S.J.D., Harvard.

JAMES B. LEWIS, Assistant Professor of Law; LL.B.

LEO DIAMOND, Associate Professor of Law; Ph.B., J.D., University of Chicago.

VINCENT E. FIORDALIS, Associate Professor of Law and Law Librarian; LL.B., Fordham University School of Law; LL.M., New York University.

ALAN V. LOWNSTEIN, Assistant Professor of Law; A.B., University of Michigan; A.M., University of Chicago; J.L., Harvard University School of Law.

GERARD B. MORAN, Assistant Professor of Law; B.S., Holy Cross; LL.B., University of Virginia.