MALCOLM D. TALBOTT
Dean Malcolm Talbott is completing his first year as Associate Dean. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University and received his law degree from Western Reserve University. When he left his Ohio law firm to fill in at Rutgers in an emergency, Ohio’s loss became Rutgers’ gain.
Dean Talbott is a member of the American Bar Association’s Joint Committee on Pre-Legal Education and Admission to the Bar. He also serves to maintain good public relations of the Law School with alumni and the community. But perhaps his most important function is that of preparing qualified and talented law students. Largely through Dean Talbott’s efforts, the caliber of students coming to Rutgers has been maintained at a high level.
After the L.L.B.—then what?
The School Placement Office officially commenced operation on August 1, 1962, with the appointment of Helen G. Hoffman as Assistant to the Dean in Charge of Placement and Special Projects. Mrs. Hoffman hopes to creatively guide students in planning their law careers and to acquaint them with the varied opportunities available. A personal interview is held with each student prior to the third year to help him individually assess his talents and interests. In addition, aid is given to help students obtain legal positions during the summer between the second and third year. Besides these activities, the procuring of loans for students is a vital undertaking of Mrs. Hoffman.
The Placement Office maintains an extensive file with respect to varied legal positions of all types, including private law practice, government, industry, and teaching, which is not confined to the state of New Jersey. Attention is given to special scholastic achievements and to the individuals' interests and ability. During the third year, campus interviews by leading firms, governments, and industry are held. Assistance is also given to Alumni of the School who return from the Army or who desire a change of association.
In this way, Mrs. Hoffman hopes that, with the aid of the School Placement Office, professional fulfillment may be achieved for Rutgers Law graduates.

INSTITUTE FOR CONTINUING LEGAL EDUCATION

The Institute for Continuing Legal Education was established in July, 1961 as a joint venture supported and administered by the State University, the New Jersey Institute for Practicing Lawyers and the New Jersey Bar Association. This is the sole institution for graduate legal education in New Jersey. The Institute has offered many programs in diverse areas of the law and has published surveys of many facets of the law in New Jersey.

In addition, the Institute embarked upon an ambitious program in June of 1963 to prepare law graduates for the New Jersey bar examination. This program was further advanced by the Supreme Court of New Jersey which by revision of the Court Rules now allows a course in Skills and Methods of New Jersey Law to be offered in satisfaction of the bar examination requirement. In order to meet the responsibility of presenting a sufficient curriculum and faculty adequate to satisfy the requirements of the Supreme Court, the Institute has enlisted the aid of more than thirty law professors and practitioners. This program will be initiated in June of 1964 and will have a term of twelve weeks. The bar review will be an integral part of the new course.
