For the past twenty years the Law Library has enjoyed steady growth. There are one hundred and fifteen thousand bound volumes as well as many thousands of unbound reprints and pamphlets, and much material on microfilm, and microcard. In volume count the library ranks among the top quarter of schools which are members of the Association of American Law Schools. It presently is adding material at the rate of about ten thousand volumes per year. The library is open to the student body one hundred and seven hours per week and is served by nine full-time staff members, as well as student help. During the past year, a large portion of the acquisitions have been duplications of certain basic sets, such as the National Reporter system, in order to relieve the pressure on this most consulted material created by a larger student body and faculty.

G. Freiberg and Law Librarian C. Allen discuss new additions to the library.

Mrs. Howell sits in the room containing the Justice Bradley collection of rare New Jersey books. The room also contains other rare books from New Jersey's past. The room is designed like the library of a colonial lawyer and provides an appropriate atmosphere for those who wish to delve into New Jersey's past.

Clerical staff for the library includes C. Wing, S. Hangman, and P. Goodman.

The Library is a Rapidly Growing Asset for Students, Faculty and Members of the Bar . . .
The Institute for Continuing Legal Education.

The Institute is a joint venture supported and administered by the New Jersey Institute for Practicing Lawyers, the New Jersey State Bar Association, and Rutgers. The purpose is to help lawyers keep abreast of developments in the law and to make available to lawyers educational opportunities for increasing their professional abilities. To accomplish this it offers programs in various centrally located New Jersey communities.

In its five-year period of operation, the Institute has offered courses in sixteen New Jersey communities that have been attended by almost 10,000 lawyers. In addition to offering a course for the Bar at large, the Institute has produced numerous publications prepared especially for the Bar of New Jersey by New Jersey lawyers.

Every summer since 1964, the Institute has offered a Skills Training Course as a prerequisite to admission as a law school. The New Jersey Bar. It is the only program of its kind in the country so it might well serve as a prototype to a number of other programs. This year the Institute received the first Federal grant to train Legal Services Project attorneys. Two cycles of a special program were offered to all the New Jersey lawyers employed in the Legal Services Projects.

Clerical staff for the Institute: Lynne Simons, Sylvia Schmera, Irene Cullough, Karen Ashback.

The Placement Office Helps to Find Positions for Students in their Chosen Fields . . .

Mrs. Helen Hoffman, Placement Director, talks to a student about his future.

Mrs. Helen Hoffman, Assistant to the Dean in Charge of Placement and Special Projects, helps to creatively guide students in planning their law careers and to acquaint them with the various opportunities available. A personal interview is held with each student prior to the third year to help him individually assess his talents and interests. In addition, aid is given to help students obtain legal positions during the summer between the second and third year. Material is made available to all students on career planning in the law.

The Placement Office maintains an extensive file with respect to varied legal positions of all types, including private law practices, government, industry, and teaching, which is not confined to the State of New Jersey. Attention is given to special scholastic achievement and to the individual's interests and ability. During the second year, campus interviews by leading firms, government, and industry are held. Assistance is also given to alumni of the School who return from the Army or who desire a change of association. In this way, the law school hopes that, with the aid of the Placement Office, professional fulfillment may be achieved for Rutgers Law graduates.
