Be it understood at the outset that the following is not set down with purpose of competing with Gibbons, Holt, Carlyle, and others of like renown. Rather, these words represent a thumbnail sketch describing with brevity the existence of what has been labelled, or, at time may prove, labelled, "the worst class in this school's history." Therefore, well may this piece be in keeping with the reputation of this class, the worst history ever written.

Individually, and presumably, with benefit of clergy in each case, the majority of our members first inhale the smell of day in our own native state—not geographically speaking—New Jersey. The average age of our brethren is a fact we choose to disregard—many a hairline having receded to the point of invisibility. Suffice to say that among our members are numbered many proud and legitimate fathers.

The class, as such, first materialized physically in October, 1947. Approaches of our status as freshmen and newcomers to the study of law, we were subjected to a course now deceased, called "Introduction to Law," a study, loosely speaking, of how and where to find the case in point. Also during our initial semester, another short-lived course made its first appearance, "Contemporary Problems," was the impressive nomenclature with which it justified its intrusion into our already-existent confusion. Therein, we were lectured by various prominent experts on the following subjects: the proposed revision to the New Jersey Constitution, labor legislation, ethics, and the Kinsey report on Sexual Behavior in the Human Male. Although the law is notoriously slow and reluctant in its recognition of science, the latter lecture, in addition to drawing legislative and editorial comment, resulted in the innovation of a recording machine in the law school. Henceforth, any faculty discourse, policy-making, critical, or otherwise important lecture will be set down on wire for posterity, ready for use in rebuttal to any unfounded criticism or distortion.

During our first year, Dobbins, the horse, deathless alter ego of many a law problem continued munching away placidly at tender shrubs conceived by Blackacre and Whiteacre while Former A and Former B, also immortal, harangued one another with offers and counter-offers bearing on Dobbins’ future husbandry and honeymoon quarters. Speaking of honeymoons, the vagaries and complexities of marriage and divorce were made reasonably clear to us during the freshman year with the consequence of many a potential bachelor being added to the ranks of those already imbued with a timidity towards the marital status.

Contrasts, Property, and Torts, in addition to other first year courses, added many an ulcer to this class, not to mention glanders, which, should it ever afflict Dobbins, would be readily diagnosed as such by our members and cured in short order, thanks to the foresightedness of the learned Professor Glessner.

Our junior year found us minus some of our initial members. One incident which occurred during this year which deserves comment is the momentous class meeting in which our members, alarmed and distressed at the manner in which a course was being presented, discussed with fervor and critical minuteness the merits and demerits of the professor’s ability as a teacher of law. The discussion was purely objective, the consensus of opinion by no means unanimous, and the result, a recorded reprisal from the Dean. And thus, with exams in May upon us all too soon, another school year was painful history.

Senior standing affords us much pride, the road has been long and difficult and although the ultimate goals, graduation and the bar exams are still before us, we feel fairly capable and accomplished, thanks to the efforts of a fine faculty. As students of law, and therefore, students of human nature, we have two important tasks. The first—making a living. The second—seeing to it that the "living" is just that and not a mere biological existence. The complex world which today is the scene of a bitter struggle between two extremely opposed ideologies invites and demands our direct participation in public life and formation of public policy. Neither let us shirk nor ignore our duties and responsibilities, as too many have done before us.

In closing, we borrow a simple, yet fitting quotation from the pen of Montaigne, as applicable today as when authored during the sixteenth century, to wit:

"Every man's manners and his mind.
-His fortune for him frame and find."
