A professional journal designed to nurture a real understanding of the law and to facilitate and promote its improvement, the Rutgers Law Review is sponsored by the Law School and administered by the Board of Student Editors, to whom the faculty and Dean allocate the primary responsibility for, and power requisite to, its publication.

Selection to the Board of Student Editors is made upon the basis of outstanding scholastic achievement, couched with a demonstrated proficiency in ability to engage in legal research, analysis and writing. Among the functions of a Review editor are to select, technically prepare for publication and edit leading articles; to determine comment worthy legal problem areas for student writing and most important, to engage in extensive legal research and writing. Participation in each of these functions offers to the student a rich educational experience outside of the classroom.

The Review now publishes four issues a year. The first issue of the Review is devoted to an Annual Survey of New Jersey Law, now in its eighth year of publication.

In 1956-1957 the Review devoted an entire issue to a Symposium on the Criminal Law of New Jersey oriented to the concept of protection of the rights of criminal defendants. The Board was fortunate in being able to number among its contributors Judge John O. Bigelow, former Vice Chancellor of New Jersey Chancery Court and former Judge of the Appellate Division of the Superior Court; William Rosmore and Samuel M. Konigsberg, members of the New Jersey Bar; Professors Gerard R. Moran, Alfred W. Blumrosen and Clarence Clyde Ferguson, Jr. Judge Phillip Forman, Chief Judge of the United States District Court for New Jersey contributed a Foreword to the Symposium issue.

The splendid co-operation of the administration, the faculty, and especially our faculty advisor, Professor Moran, made possible whatever progress the Review made in 1956-57.

Originally organized primarily to satisfy the social and professional needs of evening division students and alumni, the local Robert H. Jackson Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta Fraternity has broadened its scope and now functions as a combined day-and-evening organization, to the mutual advantage of both divisions. This development was signalled by the merger of the Chapter and an outstanding local group, Delta Sigma Phi Lex, which had a membership composed entirely of day students. All members of the local organization have become members of the Chapter.

Among the more significant activities of the combined group have been a series of get-togethers, open to all, featuring well-known speakers, who have included the Honorable Thomas Clark, Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and Raymond Del Tufo, former United States Attorney for the State of New Jersey, and others, as well as an active and successful program of purely social events.
In 1948, 15 men joined together to form King's Bench Law Fraternity, and based it upon the principle that, “this organization shall at all times during its existence, maintain an attitude of liberality, barring any discrimination on the basis of race, creed, or national origin” (from the preamble to the Fraternity Constitution). Today, nine years later in 1957, the Fraternity is still actively upholding this principle.

Many speakers have been heard by the members during this year. Justice Weintraub, the newly-appointed member of the New Jersey Supreme Court, spoke at our Annual Banquet. We have held luncheons at which various topics were discussed. A speaker from the New Jersey Division Against Discrimination explained to us the procedure and the effectiveness of the State Anti-Discrimination Laws. We heard a patent lawyer, a preceptor of a fraternity member, discuss some interesting aspects of patent law.
