JUNIOR MORNING CLASS OFFICERS

Junior Morning Class History

In September, 1931, amid the pomp and ceremony which invariably accompanies such momentous occasions, 102 embryonic chief justices of the Supreme Court assembled.

After weighty consideration, commensurate with the importance of the honor bestowed, the members of the group elected Mr. Joseph Cartucci, president; Mr. Nathaniel Sunshine, vice-president; Mr. Louis Wher, treasurer; Mr. Eldon Mills, secretary; and Mr. Harold Gurney, student council representative, and then proceeded to divide into the many and diverse channels of the law. They built themselves with the pursuit of legal knowledge in all its intricate aspects until January, when they removed the robes of the judiciary and donned the festive robes of the dance, and there, Jekyll and Hyde fashion, they turned from staid students of jurisprudence to dandlings of terpsichorean arts at the Elizabeth Town and Country Club. (F. S. It was a darn nice dance.)

This stringing into the world outside of crimes, torts, and contracts, sufficed until the spring, when the group in nummer turned to the humorous side of life in terms of Ed Wynn in "The Laugh Parade."

After this relaxation the weighty-minded group proceeded to shun the esteemed faculty into appreciation of their mental attributes with various degrees of success. The following September, undaunted by the exigencies of time and the depression, they resolutely met the more complicated problems their extensive knowledge gained the year before enabled them to cope with.

They chose for leaders, Eldon Mills, president; Ernest Tomec, vice-president; Louis Wher, treasurer; Louis Schwartz, secretary; Arnie Brogger, student council representative.

When an occasion for gaiety arose in February, they dined-danced at Blue Hills Plantation, and in the spring they attended the theatre in New York, only to come back with increased zeal and unfailing purpose.

Another year lies ahead before they leave the portals of legal pursuit to enter wider fields, confident in their integrity of purpose and the success which lies ahead.

JUNIOR AFTERNOON CLASS
Junior Afternoon Class History

Both scholastically and socially, the Junior Afternoon Class, during the season of 1932-33, has held an enviable position in the New Jersey Law School. Starting the season with the same class president and student council representative as last year, Saul O. Shur at the helm, and Irving Engelman as student council representative, the class has pursued an even course. The other officers were: Albert Plager, vice-president; Edward Rubenstein, treasurer; and Milton Miller, secretary.

The class celebrated its Junior year with a dinner dance held at the Meadowbrook Country Club, where members of the afternoon division dined with their brothers of the evening division in an evening replete with entertainment.

The Junior Afternoon Class takes pleasure in the fact that it counts among its members the highest ranking student on the Dean’s List. This member is Irving Engelman, whose enviable record, compiled during the Freshman year, earned for him the coveted leadership in the scholastic roll.

Extra-curricularly, the class entered a team composed of Saul O. Shur, Irving Engelman, and Milton Miller in the intra-mural debates. When the last year went to press these debates were still incomplete, and it is impossible to ascertain the success of the class representatives who in the Junior year reached the final round in all-school competition.

JUNIOR EVENING CLASS OFFICERS

Junior Evening Class History

In our Freshman year we came to this school, some of us confident, some of us in doubt, but all with fear somewhere in our hearts, to fight through the study of law. Slowly yet surely our ranks were widened out and we gained miserably ahead to the zero hour when the toll would be great. The burning question seemed to be: Will I be here next fall?

But only when we returned for our Junior year did we realize the effects of the first attack. The high hopes and ambitions entertained when we made our start here were somewhat shaken. We have become apprehensive of the future, but still we fought on.

The survivors gathered together and elected their officers for the new year:
Benjamin Ginsburg, president; Bernard Walsh, vice-president; Rose Lason, secretary; and Joseph Cohen, treasurer. Milton O. Valentine made varisty debating.

The new term started as do all new terms—in a flurry of excitement and anxiety, in a flutter of note-books and case-books. Finally we settled into our new routine.

The Junior Evening Class, combining with the Afternoon Class, hold a dance just before the Christmas holidays. Just a last fling before we warily set about studying for our mid-term examinations. It is needless to say that these examinations left us in a state of breathlessness, and before we get a chance to completely recover, our finals will be upon us. Team of Albert Silverman, Edward Barker, Joe O'Connor won the inter-class debating.

What does the next year hold for us? Thus far, nothing but hope.

FRESHMAN MORNING CLASS OFFICERS

Freshman Morning Class History

THE Freshman Morning Class assembled for the first time in the latter part of September, 1931. It was a gathering of students who would be associated with each other for perhaps the next three years, in the study of law. Few of the members of the class knew each other, a situation which was soon corrected.

The first item of interest that engaged the attention of the class, after having been accustomed to the new environment, was the matter of class organization. Under supervision, the class was organized and the election of officers was held, preceded by an ambitious display of electioneering. From their ranks, the students chose Edward Dinkel as their leader as president. As his assistant, William Katsky was elected vice-president. Miss Dorothy Brown was selected to act as secretary for the class. For the keeper of the class purse, Cameron Hughes was chosen. To represent the class on the student council, C. Parker Morgan was named.

With the election successfully concluded, the class, joining the wave of good fellowship that pervades New Jersey Law School, decided to hold a smoker. Accordingly, about the middle of November, a yearly gathering of fellow classmates made merry at a smoker held in Grammys' Hotel in Elizabeth, New Jersey. This function was the factor which served to unify the class, to create new friendships, and to strengthen more firmly old companionships. It was a great success, and plans are now being formulated for another smoker in May of this year, to be held in the class, meeting at the smokehouse, to the fact that the class is now a smoothly working unit in the school.

As the first year's work of the class in law school draws to a close, looking back, one may see a record of achievement, not perhaps so impressive at first glance, yet it represents the orientation of the class to its new surroundings, and looking forward, one feels certain that, the first milestone having been passed, the class will carry on in its work, imbued with perhaps greater interest in the school, its students, and the profession of law.

The Freshman Afternoon Class History

The Freshman Afternoon Division of the Class of 1935, gathered together from the far corners of the State of New Jersey and neighboring states, embarked on its studies at New Jersey Law School on a day in the early fall of the year 1931, filled with inspiration of something new and in awe of the dignity of the profession of law, the outer environs of which it was entering.

The combination of a congenial student body, a helpful faculty, and a proper environment for study soon put the group at its ease.

The first task of the class, after having become somewhat accustomed to its new surroundings, was that of organizing itself as a unit to function under the student council, which is the apex of student administration in the school.

Under the supervision of the faculty and a few upperclassmen, the class elections were held and resulted in the following leaders, being chosen: Harold Kehlau was chosen president of the class. His associates were Michael Selvitt, as vice-president; Richard H. Stock, as secretary; and Leonard Hand, as treasurer. Milton Goodman was elected to represent the class on the student council.

In accordance with the social spirit pervading the student body of the Law School, the class felt the urge to convene socially, as a change from the customary class study hours, and a theatre party was arranged. A large group from the class attended a performance of the play, "Counselor-at-Law," starring Paul Mani, when that show was playing in Newark. The class was exceedingly fortunate in having the attendance at its theatre party of Dean George S. Harris, of the New Jersey Law School faculty.

With the approach of mid-term evaluation, realizing that the real test of their qualities as future lawyers was at hand, the members of the class studied intensively, and although, as usual, a certain number did not pass, the class as a whole did comparatively well, and with reduced numbers, whose talents, however, had been tested and found true, the class entered with renewed vigor into the last semester of its Freshman year.

When it came time during the late winter to hold the annual inter-class debates, the Freshman Afternoon Class was eager to match the forensic ability of its members with that of the members of the other classes. In the debates that were held subsequently, although the class did not achieve ultimate victory, its record was creditable and some of the men it put forth in its team gave promise of material for the Varsity squad next year.

With the school year drawing rapidly to a close, the class looks forward to its work next year. As juniors, the members of the class will have reached about the half-way mark in their study of the law. They will be looked upon by the new Freshmen as the ones who will have to assume the burden of leadership when the Seniors are gone, and they will be relied on by the Seniors to aid and assist in leadership.

Thus the position of juniors represents a transition from period when they are being led to the time when they become leaders.

The next Junior Class approaches the task of leadership with confidence in its ability and a determination to keep up the standard of achievement as established by former classes.

FRESHMAN EVENING CLASS History

THE words of Sir William Blackstone, written at a time when that great jurist was about to enter upon the study of law, express the Evening Freshman's state of mind:

"Then welcome business, welcome strife,
Welcome the cares, the thorns of life,
The vigil wax, the pore-blind sight,
The toil by day, the lamp at night,
The tedious forms, the solemn oaths,
The pert dispute, the dull debate,
The drowsy bench, the bubbling hall—
For thee, fair Justice, welcome all!"

Yes, these enthusiastic Freshmen "welcome all," including Professor Sorg's entertaining. deviations from the subject of Real Property and the dismal warnings of Dean Harris. They devote themselves ardently to everything, save briefs—and the case-system soliloquy: to brief briefly or not to brief at all, is but natural, of course, even the Seniors finding themselves engaged in the theme at times.

Officers of the class are: president, Richard Carmody; vice-president, Joseph Longo; treasurer, George Schuster; secretary, Ann Copeland; student counsel representative, J. Leonard Weins.

This is one of the smallest evening classes, but is it many members who show positive signs of becoming distinguished alumni. The group is already well represented in all phases of school activity. Their first social gathering, a successful and enjoyable one, was held at The Chasleer, Millburn, New Jersey, on December 16, 1932.
