New Jersey Law Debates Princeton
Before Large Audience
Decision For Negative on Nicaragua Question

William F. Watters

Arguing the merits of a question that has been of considerable public interest in recent weeks, New Jersey Law School met Princeton University in debate Friday night in the Old First Church. Unlike the first debate of the season, which the Law School won from McGill University of Montreal, the debate with Princeton was a no-decision affair. The Law School team, however, and demonstrated that it can hold its own with the ranking debating groups in the inter-collegiate field.

With Dr. Elmer G. Gherry, president of Princeton University, acting as moderator, the debate was conducted under the system used at Oxford University. Two members of each team argued the affirmative and two the negative. The audience, which numbered about 500, voted the negative debaters the winners.

The question debated was: "Resolved, that this house approves the policy of the Coolidge administration in Nicaragua." The Law School team won credit for their showing against the Princeton team in view of the fact that the Tigers had argued the same question with Yale the week previous. The East Park Street boys were, therefore, under a handicap, at least as far as arguing their points before an audience.

On the negative side was our old standby and captain, Reginald C. S. Parnell, president of the Senior Morning Class. And, as usual, "Reg" acquitted himself with glory. When he comes to debating "Reg" can put it over and used with him on the negative side was one of the Princeton stars, Gardner B. Moment, a Montclair man.

Mr. Parnell pulled the affirmative argument apart and ridiculed the idea, as set up by the affirmative speakers, that the United States was interfering in Nicaragua for the purpose of bringing about peace and contentment.

After pointing out that the United States Maritime Service marched into Nicaragua to the tune of "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here," Mr. Parnell said they were all there, but they had no business there. Mr. Parnell declared the president of Nicaragua, Alfredo Diaz, who is recognized by the United States, was elected by an illegal Congress adding that Diaz is a moonlighter for the State Department of this country and the interests which control it. Mr. Parnell recounted the interference of the United States in the affairs of other countries and said the attitude of the Coolidge administration in the Nicaraguan trouble was out of step with the great true heart of the American people.

"Well might Nicaragua say," Mr. Parnell declared, "defend me from my friends, I can defend myself against my enemies. What a tragedy it is in this nation continues a policy that is bringing down on us all the criticism of the nation of the world." The Coolidge policy, Mr. Parnell continued, may be a form of New England honor, but the country at large fails to appreciate it. The administration, he said, as Answers of all codes of justice, has interfered with the Central American government, adding that it was the most ferocious doctrine of isolation that has ever been propped.

Mr. Parnell suggested that the Nicaraguan trouble be submitted to arbitration, urging that the United States get away from the use of force. In that way, he said, this country will recover the friendship and respect of the people of Central America.

"Let us live and let live," Mr. Parnell concluded in condemning the administration.

STUDENT AID

The school year is rapidly drawing to a close. The spring vacation period is at our very door. At this point of the year college students picture with awe and despair the dates of the final examinations. The cause of this tremendous anxiety is due to the fact that students are at a loss as to what method of study to employ in preparing for these tests.

A thorough review of the cases studied in class together with notes on these cases is a positive requisite for such a preparation. After complying with this most necessary requirement, a student may refer to one of the standard text books for further aid.

"Outlines for Review" and "Bar Questions and Answers" published by the American Law Book Co., and Haight's "Bar and Quiz Questions and Answers" are among the best books for review. The books from the press of the American Book Co., offer type questions together with the citation where the answer to the query may be found. Haight's book covers thoroughly every subject offered for study in a Law School.

Students are cautioned against using the above mentioned texts as a sole basis of study. They should be used only after the student has a complete knowledge of the cases studied in class. A strict compliance with this procedure will aid the student materially.

To the Editor:
Only a few weeks ago the then editor of the Freshman Evening News sincerely expressed the desire of the members of the class he represented, to contribute to the construction of a firmament that might aid in the elevation of New Jersey Law School. In a few quicks, he endeavored to reveal the temperament of some three hundred men and women, affiliated with law mantillets, promising any cooperate necessary to aid in the strengthening of class and school spirit.

Though the plan was not entirely in accord with ideas of the Evening Class, they willingly sacrificed personal interests in behalf of the school, and it is the writer's wish to heartily endorse The Barrister and aid in the humble manner which might befell his lot.

EDWIN F. CORRISTON.

The Student Council of New Jersey Law School
Faculty, Alumni and Student Body to be Represented.

At the first meeting of the several class representatives which was held at the Hotel St. Francis, a committee was formed known as the "Student Council Constitutional Committee." This committee has been working faithfully on a proposed constitution which will be submitted to a representative group of students at a meeting next Saturday afternoon. Fire students will be chosen from each section and it will be their duty to pass on the tentative set of laws. It is needless to say that the Student Council will furnish a long felt want by bringing together the students and faculty and in developing a "school spirit" which should be felt by each individual member of the New Jersey Law School organization.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM THE LEGACY

We of the Legacy welcome you with enthusiasm to the first new infant among our curly circle. As one infant to another we greet you with gentle glories. We do not grumble in your ears. There is no necessity for our expressions to be anything that we wish to fill, in fact our entire envelope and doing different things.

Congratulations are due their young but rapid and lusty growth. You have in two issues reached those milestones that their need is to be sung. It is surely more than the most distant among you to regret this absence.

To the entrepreneurs of this name we who are the part, have not the smallest doubt that both our equations shall simply heighten.

To the entrepreneurs who dare, go the rewards.

HERBERT C. HUNSAKER

A highlight of the help volunteered effort is the making of a student newspaper. Both students and faculty have for some time felt the desirability of benefiting from such a paper, the Barometer and Freshman News, respectively. In the last published by the newspaper club, 21 men and women are represented among the classes in the course of the week. This is due to all of the students in the course classes who are interested in the Freshman News.

The committee has already disposed of some thousand-colored, white Mid-week paper that we have made no effort to print a second. They have been distributed to the students in the course classes in the course of the week.

The Freshman News has been published by the newspaper club, 21 men and women are represented among the classes in the course of the week. This is due to all of the students in the course classes who are interested in the Freshman News.

YOU HAVE ANY?

SCHOOL Spirit. How often have you heard that term used and exploited? But just what is school spirit, and do you know what it means to the students at the Institute? One wonders if it has shape or color; if it is tangible or intangible, if it can be heard, seen, or felt. To some it is just a few meaningless syllables—a word to be repeated parent fashion—but devoid and empty of true meaning. To others it is something intangible, perhaps an emotion. To others it is the pride. To be proud of one school and his alma mater is to be proud of the whole group, because each individual is a part of the activities and wishes to be part, naturally, and not just another student occupying space. The student spirit of the school, which is something intangible, is something worth while. HAVE ANY TOOL?

SMALLER CLASSES

THERE are many ways of giving instruction and the method varies with the instruction and the subject matter. Of course some courses are limited to one or two methods, their peculiar nature making any other impossible. Interaction in the Law has been found by experiment, may be best given in one way.

The law students at the Law School were originally led to study the legal principles of law and the methods of study which could be best employed. The lecture system in the Law School was not a large one. The lecture system in the Law School was introduced and it was demonstrated that it could be used most efficiently to the greater advantage of the students. Since then the principle of the Case System has gradually spread throughout the United States and has become a widespread use in reputable law institutions. To obtain the greatest possible benefit from the Case System small classes are necessary and distinctly desirable from all points of view. The principle of the Case System has the opportunity for the students to attack both sides of a question so that it becomes possible to clarify doubt by avoiding the discussion raised. Even before the public became aware of the need for a return to the old system is inevitable because it is obviously impossible to continue the system of the class of three or four hundred students.

THERE are times in the history of any institution when it suddenly commences about the concept of maturity. Many Law School in such a period of rising conscious-ness at this hour and all who are with us in the future know that this school is at a point of giving birth to another era which has been solidified into a typical New Jersey Law School copybook.

The class deems to be held at the Robert Treat Hotel, May 7th, the coming publication “The Legal” and the Barrister, a great future for our school. When a student body and a class expresses its desire to solidify itself and exist beyond the present by setting examples for others to follow, there can be a feeling of certainty that the future classes and students will pass on our ways.

Activities are coming fast. We are all set to reach high goals and when they are higher than before, we are not driven, but the feeling of pleasure at our attempts to reach them without fear and without doubt.

BETTER LEGAL EDUCATION

Due to our social problem having constant consequence the more complex the more difficult to find at every hand a great compiler for better the law and the student teachers. And the law student of today is the lawyer of tomorrow. In order to obtain this end the bar examination is looked upon as the place for training men to plead cases, to give advice to clients, to defend criminals; but to be regarded as the place one can know all sound learning relating to the fundamentals of justice, the history of the law, the doctrine of jurisprudence, those branches of learning which is the most finished statesman and legislator ought to know. The ultimate purpose is to reach the lawyer in the making so that when he goes to the Bar he will have learned to think not merely the facts.

Today we find law schools striving to train their students to be not only successful practicing lawyers but also men who feel the importance and the need for a law in the development of law as a social institution. One of the ways this is accomplished is by the addition of laboratory classes. Each laboratory has been set up to study all the legal principles and the occurs in the field of medicine. Having a law review or journal. It is with great approval that we receive the information that NEW JERSEY LAW SCHOOL is contemplating having a law review next semester. Mention should be made of a Committee appointed for a better training for a law student.

Unfortunately law in the majority of instances has been locked upon prior to the occupation or a means of livelihood and not as a science applied to the service of society. To offset this, the law student should be taught that his livelihood will not be the paramount interest, but that an aptitude will be created to serve society.

With the realization that the social problem of the day is more intricate, the legal problem of the practicing lawyer and the judge have increased. We are today in a world of business, and the lawyer and the judge, much more than the legislator, to whom we must look for the fashioning of the law to suit the world as it is, are men to whom the bar is due to. It has been the tradition that law practice is a stepping stone to political and financial success. Pleading for a few years, or even a month, will not enable our students to gain membership in the bar association, but they will be in the good graces of the political figures whose names are desired by the people.

Upon their return they are to be their constituents. They are to build upon the tradition that the legal problem is a stepping stone to political and financial success.

It is crucial to reflect on what truly matters and how we can make a positive impact in the world.

It seems that discipline has become the order of the day. Every professor in New Jersey Law School has been known to stand up to his students and make them sit up straighter. One of the professors, Professor Tyme, has been known to lecture mercilessly on the evils ofBASEBALL.

Some of our students have no outward signs of possessing any of the virtues that seem to inspire the phrase, "the indispensable man," the keynote of Professor Tyme has been laid the very essentials of the course, and the usefulness thereof may seem to be somewhat questionable. It is a fact, however, that the law is required by the state, and those who do not go in it are likely to become of value to the community.

Every time a new era of politics begins, there is a flood of opinions from many quarters. The men of the Bar are beginning to see that the Bar is a community, and that the Bar is in the hands of the people. The Bar is a community of lawyers, and the people are its members.

Laws are described as great forces at work. They order the world, and their force is felt everywhere. Laws are the life of society, and the people are the members of society.

The Bar is a community of lawyers, and the people are its members. The Bar is a community, and the people are its members. The Bar is a community, and the people are its members.
